

What will you tell her about screening mammography?

Many of your patients will hear about screening mammography through a program launched by the American Cancer Society and the American College of Radiology, and they may come to you with questions. What will you tell them?

We hope you'll encourage them to have a screening mammogram, because that, along with your regular breast examinations and their monthly self examinations, offers the best chance of early detection of breast cancer, a disease which will strike one woman in 10.

If you have questions about breast cancer detection for asymptomatic women, please contact us.

MEDICAL ONCOLOGY FACULTY POSITION University of Rochester Cancer Center

The Medical Oncology Division of the University of Rochester Cancer Center and the Department of Medicine of the University Medical Center (Strong Memorial Hospital) are seeking applicants for a position at the Assistant or Associate Professor level. Applicants must be board certified in Internal Medicine, board certified/board eligible in Medical Oncology and have had some experience in the conduct of clinical trials and/or basic science in oncology research. The successful candidate will interact with the basic and clinical scientists, have access to and support a variety of shared resources within the Cancer Center, and will be encouraged to conduct either clinical or laboratory programs with independent funding within a reasonable time after appointment.

Direct patient care responsibilities will not exceed 20% time and effort. The University of Rochester Cancer Center is a Designated National Cancer Institute supported center with a large clinical and basic science faculty. The Medical Oncology Division emphasizes clinical trial research (intramural and extramural via the Eastern Cooperative Oncology Group) in a setting of maximum support from nursing, pharmacy and social work services. The position will be filled by July 1, 1993.

Applicants should send their c.v. and three letters of recommendation to:
